

Privacy

In order to operate and provide membership, we collect certain information about you. By becoming a member of Macrotesting, you consent to the transfer of information outside of your country.

Information about you can be categorized as (a) personally identifiable information, or (b) non-personally identifiable information. "Personally identifiable information" is information that we collect from you such as your name, postal address, telephone number, fax number and email address. "Non-personally identifiable information" is information that we collect from you that does not include your name or any information that would allow us to contact you.

How We Use and Disclose Information

Some of the ways in which we use your personally identifiable information may include using it to provide you with information that you may request, and to customize your website experience. If, at the point where you give us personally identifiable information, and a box is checked indicating that you would like to receive information about special offers and promotions, then Macrotesting will also use such personally identifiable information to send you information that we believe might be of interest to you. Because we care about your privacy, we will not give your personally identifiable information to other marketers or retailers for use to contact you about offers or promotions of their products.

At Macrotesting we believe obeying the law is important. Therefore, we may disclose personally identifiable information in order to comply with a subpoena or court order or when we are required to do so by law. We may also disclose personally identifiable information in cooperation with a law enforcement or government request. It is important for you to understand that the above policies and restrictions do not apply to our use or disclosure of your non-personally identifiable information. This information helps us to interact with visitors to our site. We may freely use and disclose non-personally identifiable information for many purposes and on many occasions. Examples of how we use and disclose non-personally identifiable information include measuring and analyzing site usage, system administration and improving our site. A cookie, a small data file maybe placed on your computer's hard drive. It may contain information (such as a unique user ID) that a website may use to track certain things. We use cookies in order to improve your website visit. The cookie helps us track the pages of our site that you visit, tells us whether you have been to our site before and tells us which website you visited immediately before visiting our site, but does not tell us about your use of any other websites. The cookie does not tell us who you are or how to contact you. Unless you have submitted personally identifiable information to us as described below we have no personal information about you. You can keep us from using cookies by turning them off in your browser. However, if you turn off your cookies, certain parts of our website may not function on your computer.